Lecture and Meetings.

The people of Norway and vicinity will be offered a rich treat by way of a lecture, Nov. 16, by Rev. E. T. Pitts of Fryeburg formerly of Boston at Congregational church. The subject of the lecture will be "Some Fools and Their Follies." The lecturer says the design of this lecture is to turn the light on some of the follies of the day and to picture some of the foolish people that indulge in them. The lecture abounds in fact, fancy, fun and personal incident.

The Press comments on and of Mr. Pitts' lectures as follows:

Steep Falls, August 10.—The Rev. Edgar T. Pitts gave an interesting and instructive lecture-recital at Pythian hall in this village on Thursday evening, August 6, to an appreciative audience. The subject, "An Hour with Some Wits and Humorists," was handled in the masterly manner which Mr. Pitts so well understands using, the descriptive matter being so interspersed with quotation and anecdote that peal after peal of laughter and applause filled the house. Correspondent Portland Daily Press.

Tuesday evening following the lecture will begin a short series of meetings under the direction of the pastor, Rev. B. S. Rideout, assisted by the lecturer, Rev. E. T. Pitts.

These meetings are after the Forward Movement plan of the Congregational churches of the State. Admission is charged to the lecture but all the religious meetings beginning Tuesday evening Nov. 17 are free to the public, no collection. It is hoped that the movement will benefit the whole community. All the churches are invited to attend and co operate.

The writer of this notice, B. S. Rideout, has been acquainted with Mr. Pitts twenty-five years, a classmate with him in college, and can vouch for his character and ability. It is rare that the people of this place have the privilege of listening to such an able and interesting speaker.

Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Barnes were the readers. Discussion and questions followed.

We are trying to tell you how much these meetings help the mothers. I am sure if you had laid aside some things possibly you might have been there. One part of our program was especially enjoyable, the singing of Mrs. Whitman.

Just now the club is much interested in the Cradle Roll. In getting the baby we hope to reach the mother, and thus through her love for her own help her to see some of the best ways in which to direct the life given to her.

The following is a synopsis of some of the things we hope to learn about this coming season:

The foregoing subjects will be taken up in an interesting way, illustrated and discussed so they will be practicable helps for mothers and others.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. W. F. Jones, Nov. 11, Wednesday afternoon. We are asking the members of the club and all mothers to make a special effort to attend. Refreshments will be served—nothing to pay, much to get. An interesting program is being prepared.

Paris Wins from Norway.

The Norway high school team was thoroughly outplayed by Paris high on the fair grounds, Wednesday afternoon, the game commencing about 4 o'clock. The Paris boys were much heavier than Norway, and having the advantage of several weeks more training were better disciplined. Several of Norway's men apparently had played but little in actual games, and the team work was not very good.

In mass plays Norway held Paris at times excellently, and in several downs the latter made no gain.

South Paris kicked off to Boynton who lost the ball when tackled. Paris advanced the ball repeatedly and got first touchdown in three minutes of play, Penfold making the play. He failed to kick the goal.

The ball was in Norway's territory all the time and was slowly pushed toward the goal line. Penfold broke around the line and made Paris' second touchdown. Again he failed to kick the goal.

Again Paris made repeated gain but was held well, and only about half way down the field when the time expired. Score, 10 to 0.

In the second half Norway held better and on the whole made a good showing, but the superior weight of Paris gradually worked the ball down the field.

Penfold played the end run again and made the third touchdown. This time the ball went neatly over the goal on the kick.

Paris kicked to Cotton who made a splendid run, but lost the ball before he could make the goal line. Paris advanced the ball down the field and put it across the line just as the time run out. Penfold again failed on the try for the goal.

Their numbers will be worth the admission price. See program on page 6 of this paper.

NATURE'S OWN CURE.

Hyomei Cures Catarrh Without Dangerous Drugging of the Stomach.

Not until Hyomei was discovered has it been possible to truthfully say that a remedy for catarrh was known.

This remedy is breathed through the Hyomei inhaler for a few minutes four times a day, and during that time every particle of air taken into the air passages and lungs is impregnated with the germ killing and health giving Hyomei. It is the only treatment that cures catarrh.

Stomach drugging often causes disordered digestion or brings on some other diseases and never makes a permanent cure of catarrh. Hyomei not only kills the germs in the throat and nose but penetrates to the minutest air cells in the lungs and enters the blood with the oxygen, killing the germs in the blood. It frees the mucous membrane from poisonous microbes and gives perfect health

A complete outfit costs but $1.00, and includes an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks treatment. Frank Kimball has so much faith in the merit of Hyomei that he agrees to return the money to any purchaser who may be dissatisfied.

Indian Summer.

HORTENSE GARDNER GREGG.

The gay leaf-tints are sombre,
The woodland ways are bare,
And a breath of summer languor
Seems in the balmy air.

The last fair blooms of autumn
Have perished one by one;
The grasses of the meadow
Are browning in the sun.

Only the rock-fern lingers
Beside the wand'ring rill,
Its bending fronds in beauty
Are green and graceful still.

One day of summer glory,
One day unknown to care,
When Nature rests a moment
And God smiles everywhere.

Then, woo'd by the southern breezes,
Our sweet dream-guest is flown;
And out from icy caverns
The North-King claims his own.

Kept.

Keep Thou me, O Christ,
Where'er I be,
In sickness and in health
O keep Thou me.

If I should from Thee stray
In worldly way,
This is my plea:
That Thou will not forsake
But show me my mistake,
O keep Thou me.

In all the ways of life,
In shade and sun
O keep Thou me.
And when my brief day here
On earth is done,
Still keep Thou me.

Song-o'-Sixpence.

"Sing a song o' sixpence,"
A bottle full of "Rye,"
Four and twenty drunkards
Slept in a sty.

When the sty was opened
They all began to think
And scheme and plan and reckon
How to get a drink.

The first went to a rum-shop,
But hadn't any money,
The second one was ditto,—
Their always so, 'tis funny.

The third ran to a pawn-shop
And pawned his only clothes
And thus they got the fluid
That tints a body's nose.

When the bottle's empty
They're only filled with pain,
But if a friend should fill it
The labor'd be in vain,
For the four and twenty drunkards
With all their might and main
Would hasten much, and hustle,
To empty it again.

Courtesy Means Self Respect.

However high an estimate one may place on himself or herself, it amounts to but little in the end and aggregate if he or she has not that regard and kindly consideration of another's feelings and good will so requisite in all good circles.

Respect for others means self respect as well, for whoever is not willing to observe the law of kindness by using superiors, equals and subordinates courteously, has not that proper self respect that is always so fascinatingly attractive and much to be desired, and that goes to make the truly refined person. Be polite, if only for one's own interest, by all means.

Also we are told, "He that respects others is constantly respected by them." Here there is another and great reason why we should observe such law of kindness and courtesy For example, a lady on casually meeting another on the street one day, one whom she occasionally met at different places, though she was not much acquainted with her personally, spoke to her pleasantly, making some commonplace remark and asking her a very civil question. She was answered by a cold, saucy look, as much as to say, "You annoy me," and the manner of the reply suggested the reply (though unexpressed), "A cat may look at a king," etc.

Now this act of lady No. 2, although it could not really harm the one misused or treated so discourteously, certainly did harm the one who had so little self respect that she would not answer the question with civility, though she had no reason whatever for such indifference, while the one who addressed her, although her opinion of her antagonist had previously been very good, at once decided that she had been mistaken; and withal much disappointed in her and not permanently injured by her.

So much for unkindness or rudeness. Let us be true to ourselves, and though we may not care to be intimate with all, and indeed we cannot well be so, we can cultivate a kindly and courteous spirit toward all, "inasmuch as in us lies," and not wilfully and without just cause, at least, injure another's feelings by a cold and blood-freezing slight, through undeserved prejudice or some unjust cause, for such behavior belongs only to knaves and the lowest classes of our land, and should not be indulged in by any respectable or so-called gentle-folks, at the risk of their good name.

Place such misdemeanor as beneath you at once. Respect others and you will be respected by them. They are equals, who can control themselves equally well. But they are superiors, whose conduct is better than others.

JENNIE E. SNOW KIMBALL.

The First Thanksgiving.

The first Thanksgiving occurred in the Plymouth Colony soon after the landing of the Pilgrims in 1621. The little harvest of the settlers had been successfully gotten in, the Indians were for the moment peaceful and everything looked brighter and more promising to the little community than it had for a long time, so a day of thanksgiving to God for his great mercies was appointed. Of the best huntsmen of the colony four were singled out by the Governor who sent them "fowling that there might be wherewithal for a feast and of rejoicing." The game they brought back with them was the wild turkey; hence the bird whose sovereignty on that day has for over two hundred years been undisputed.

It is believed by best authorities that the first celebration took place in October, as it was out of doors and lasted nearly a week. Every twelvemonth or so other days of thanksgiving followed for about forty-seven years but at no one given time or season. Each congregation appointing the day that it deemed most convenient, sometimes it occurred in the spring after a hard winter, more often in the fall to return thanks for a generous harvest.

It is now the close season on dropstitch stockings and peek-a-boo waists.

A Good Bear Story.

A good story is told of a young business man who in Massachusetts is well known, who came up into Oxford county where he had relatives and friends to spend a few days hunting. He had listened to many bear stories where bruin had been luxuriating on our farmers' fat lambs lambs and their corn fields until he had evidently sized bruin up to be quite a formidable animal, and this perhaps had something to do with his later experience.

One afternoon, after putting on his war paint and donning his attire for the hunt he started out to see what could be found in the woods of his relative farmer, but as he did not return and it was late in the evening a few of the neighbors were got together and a hunt instituted.

After searching several hours they finally located the young hunter well up in the tops of a large spruce tree where he had climbed, leaving his gun many rods from the tree in his haste to get away from what he supposed to be a vicious bear that was on his trail in hot pursuit. The young hunter came down from his perch and told of his narrow escape of being destroyed by a bear.

The next day an examination was made of the locality and no signs of a bear could be found, and it was supposed the young man's fright must have been due to a large shepherd dog that was owned by his relative with whom he was stopping following him and the young man mistaking him in the woods for a bear.

The young man has no further desire for hunting and will soon return to his native city and is now laboring under mental fear lest this little episode will become known to his friends in Massachusetts, but we have all promised to keep mum as the grave.

Foxes in Traps.

One Maine Guide Has a Novel But Successful Way of Trapping Them.

There is no animal in the Maine woods possessed with more cunning than the red fox and, as is well known, the slyness of these animals has passed into a proverb, "sly as a fox" being a term often heard. The trapping season is now just beginning and many hunters throughout the state are using all the wits they possess in endeavors to be slyer than the fox himself.

There are many different ways to catch reynard, but there is one well known and old trapper in the forests of this state who perhaps stands at the head of the list in catching foxes. He has a manner of catching these animals which he calls his "secret," a plan which he learned when a boy in Vermont and has successfully used for the past twenty years.

Fox skins or pelts bring a good price and from the beginning of the cool weather in October throughout the winter the hides are in fine condition. Steel traps, bait and many different things are used by different trappers in catching foxes but this old trapper's "secret" stands at the top.

His manner of procedure when after the little red dogs is somewhat as follows: In a part of the woods which is known to be inhabited by foxes and they can be found in nearly all sections of Maine this trapper with a steel trap, some cat meat if it can be procured and some skunk musk proceeds to set his snares. Cat meat makes the best bait but other meat or beef will do.

Going up a brook, wading with rubber boots so that no scent will be left he makes a small drain or canal from the brook into which the water will flow. This little canal is always dug out with a stick so that the hands do not come into contact with the earth and no smell of a human being is left.

A small stick is then set upright in the middle of the stream or little canal, the point being but an inch or so under water and the bait is put on that so it looks as if resting on the water. As this necessarily has to be handled a small amount of skunk musk is put on it so that no scent is left. A little of the "skunk juice" goes a long way and that is usually the only thing which can be smelt around the spot for some time.

The steel trap is then sunk under the water where the canal, or if it is in the brook proper, is but a few inches deep.

On the plate of the trap, where an animal has to step to be caught, is put a small sod which lies half in and half out of the water as if it were a small island. This is but a few inches from the bait on the stick.

The result is plainly seen. No animal will wet its feet if there is dry land to step on and Sir Reynard coming after the meat resting so temptingly on the water naturally steps on the little island or mound to get it and is lost.

A trap of this kind is never fastened down as an animal will tear itself loose oftentimes if securely held. A fair sized stick is attached by a rope or chain to the trap and the fox cannot drag it far as it catches on all the trees, bushes or whatever is in the way.

The Mercy of Death.

Again it seems needful to call attention to the fact that every hunter who goes to the Maine woods after game should take extraordinary pains to shoot straight and to shoot with sufficient weight of lead to kill. If there is one kind of cruelty more barbarous and needless than any other, the particular kind which needs immediate attention is this practice of shooting at deer at long range or shooting with double B or buckshot.

The idea of an innocent creature which has never wrought harm to any human being lingering along for weary days and restless nights, bearing fatal wounds about its body, yet wounds of a kind that makes an immediate and merciful death impossible, to think of such a fate is enough to cause a shudder to creep up and down one's spine.

It is cruel enough to kill deer outright. They are so beautiful to look at, so graceful in every movement and so timid in action that most men are sorry they have shot after they see their fallen prey lying helpless in the woods gasping for breath. Somehow as one grows older such scenes take hold more closely upon the finer sensibilities.

None of us are so pressed by hunger as to feel obliged to shoot deer. We can buy beef and pork and mutton from professional butchers and marketmen without soiling our consciences with the knowledge that we have taken the life of one of God's most innocent creatures. But if we must shoot deer, if the ancient savagery within us will not be refused, in the name of mercy and in the name of common decency, let us shoot to kill. Let there be no wounded deer escape to die from slow torture through any mistake of ours.

Stay East, Young Man.

If You are Smart, Maine Offers Some Good Opportunities.

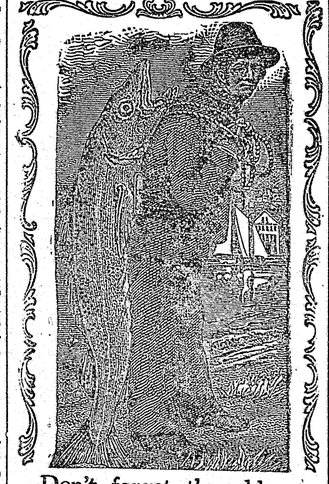

In support of the statements about the general prosperity they have found over the State of Maine on their rounds the past year, the state assessors can adduce some rather startling facts and figures. When the reports of about half the towns were in for the past year, the assessors estimated from the figures of the town assessors that the valuation of taxable property in the cities and towns had increased about $6,000,000 since the year before. A little later it began to appear that the increase was over $7,000,000, and now it is very evident that on the most conservative estimate the increase is over $8,000,000, the largest that has been shown in any year since the board was organized in 1891. The total increase in the valuation of taxable property in cities, towns and plantations since 1890 has been $61,000,000. Add to this the increase of $27,000,000 on savings banks, the $13,000,000 on trust and banking associations, the $2,000,000 on loan and building associations, the 15,000,000 on national banks, and the $7,000,000 on wild lands, and it brings the total increase since 1890 up to $125,000,000 in round numbers, and the most of the figures given cover only the time up to last year.

All this leaves out of the account the enormous increase in the valuation and mileage of railroads during these years, and says nothing about the fact that in 1890 there were only seven street railways in the state, with a total mileage of 45 22 miles, while there are now 27 street railways with a mileage of 300 27 miles and a total investment of nearly $10,000,000. The wages paid laborers in manufactures were $2,000,000 in 1900 than in 1890, and the value of the manufactured products was $32,000,000 greater.

All this goes to show that the state of Maine is only just being discovered, and that Maine is being by no means left behind in the race for prosperity and property. The young man is no longer advised to go West. He can go if he wants to, but someone else will make money at home and be ready to take a mortgage on his Western ranch or buy his mining stock for a song by and by.

Willie D. Littlefield of Dixfield, who at one time carried on a marble business there, has gone to Boston and has entered the employment of the Boston Elevated Railway Company as a motorman on the Tremont street surface cars.

Hon. Edward F. Brown of New York city has arranged to donate $50 yearly to Bridgton Academy to be devoted to prizes for speaking. He was on the board of trustees seventeen years, until ill health compelled his withdrawal, and has made many donations to the school.

A Good Crop of Corn And How We Raised It.

H. E and H. D. Hammond of Paris are known far and wide as good farmers. We copy what they have to say about raising sweet corn as it is worthy of a careful reading by all our farmer readers.]—ED.

It has been generally considered a hard year for sweet corn. The spring was very dry, the summer was wet and cold and the early frost destroyed much of the crop on the low land, so the pack is very small throughout the state. We were among the favored ones that got a big crop for this year and a good crop for any year.

We raised on two and one half acres and hauled to the corn shop enough to come to one hundred and fifty-one dollars and fifty two cents ($151.52) besides two dollars' worth that we sold to other parties.

HOW IT WAS RAISED.

We broke up the ground in the fall. We prefer to plough in the fall, the the soil works deeper, and if there is any witch grass the roots are exposed to the frost and are frozen out. We spread on what manure we made through the summer, about thirty ox loads to the acre as far as it went and harrowed it in with a spring tooth harrow. We prefer to spread the manure on top of the furrows rather than plough it under. We have tried both ways, but got the best results by spreading on top. Where we spread the manure in the fall we harrow the ground well before winter. As soon as we could in the spring and again just before we planted it we harrowed it again. We followed the same course in the spring. Spread on the winter's manure and harrowed it well before planting. It is a good plan to harrow all you think is necessary and then go over it again once more.

We planted our corn the 12th and 20th of May. The old rule to plant your corn on the 20th of May is a good one. The danger of frost after that time is not nearly as great as it is in September. We used a corn planter, and the hills were eighteen inches apart. We put on about 300 pounds of superphosphate to the acre. Ten quarts of seed were used to the acre.

When the corn was up so we could see the rows we went through it with a cultivator. We prefer a cultivator to a weeder. If we could have our choice between a weeder and a good industrious hen with a flock of a dozen chickens to cultivate a corn field we would take the hen every time. She would do better work and less harm than a weeder.

When the corn was three or four inches high we went over it again with the cultivator and hoed it, before haying we went over it again with the cultivator and hoe. At the second hoeing we thinned it out to three or four stalks to the hill. It is better to thin out your own corn rather than to depend upon the crows.

About the tenth of July we went over it again with the cultivator. After haying we went through it and pulled out the weeds that were left. We don't expect a big pig weed and a big ear of corn in the same hill. The "man with the hoe" is a very important factor in the corn field.

Our corn was ready for the factory about the 20th of September. This is way we raised a good crop of sweet corn this year. If anyone has a better way or has made a failure, these columns are open and his correspondence is respectfully solicited.—[Democrat.

When your hands and head are weary
And your soul has lost its song;
When the road is hot and dreary,
And the way seems very long;
When you have no heart for action,
When you need the spurr and rod—
There's a world of satisfaction
In a plod, plod, plod!

Remembering Birthdays.

An exchange notes the fact that in the journal of Louisa M. Alcott is a little record which is deeply pathetic, when one remembers how her brave unselfish life was spent unwearyingly for others: "My birthday; thirty-six Spent alone, writing hard. No presents but father's 'Tablets'. I never seem to have many presents, as some do, though I give a good many. That is best, perhaps, and makes a gift very precious when it does come."

Yes, the giving is best, there is no doubt of that; that she was, after the first hard years able to give so much to those she loved was the great joy of Miss Alcott's life. Yet how pitiful it seemed that so loving a heart should know the hurt of being remembered!

"We don't make much of birthdays at our house," a girl said, the other day. "There are so many of us, you know. Once in a while somebody will say, 'I think you might congratulate me,' and then we all suddenly remember."

But why not remember beforehand, and make the day a glad one? It does not need money, necessarily; some tiny touch of festivity at the table, birthday letters under the plate, or tucked in odd corners to be discovered one by one, a little treat, in which all can join—such simple things as these will be eloquent of love, and make the day one of memory's shining heritages.

It costs a little trouble, so much the better. Surely our love for our dear ones is not measured by our ease. Could we forgive ourselves ever if some day we learned, too late, that a loved one had been grieving because she thought we did not care?—[Western Recorder.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

In Search of Health.

Our old friend, Dr. J. Cushing Gallison of Franklin, Mass., writes the following interesting letter from Camp Brigham, that was published in the Sentinel of Oct. 2d:—

"Go to the foot hills of the White Mountains and live out of doors for a month."—By this advice of a distinguished Boston physician, I am living in a tent, high in the pure air of this mountain region, endeavoring to overcome an obstinate throat trouble. It is a most lovely place. Words can give but a feeble idea of it. Away to the north, Mount Washington looms high in air. The entire presidential range is in plain view. To the west, Mount Kearsarge looks down upon us. For this mountain was named the famous battle ship that conquered the rebel Alabama. Southwest is Pleasant Mountain surmounted by a hotel. Chocorua, Carregain, Bald-face, Rattlesnake, Carter's and scores of famous White Mountains make for us a wonderful panorama.

This entire region is historic. The Pequaket valley stretches away before us. This was the land of the warlike tribe that fought the bloody battle of Lovewell's Pond in 1725, with troops from Haverhill, Ipswich, Andover and other Massachusetts towns. The scene of the battle is just below us. In Fryeburg, close to the New Hampshire line, Daniel Webster once taught the ancient academy. Here was born the artist, Eastman Johnson, who painted the picture of the "Barefoot Boy," which suggests the well known poem of Whittier. South of us lies Sebago Lake, upon whose shores lived Hawthorne, as a lad, dreaming of the "Scarlet Letter" and "The House of Seven Gables."

North of our camp, but in plain view, is buried Artemus Ward, my chum of the ancient printing office. Here in Waterford he was born, and commenced his career as showman in the little village by exhibiting the family cow, as an elephant, covered with his mother's rag carpet. At our feet, in Denmark or Bridgton, is the birthplace of ex-Governor Henry B. Cleaves, also of the famous surgeon, John Hancock Kimball, for nine years chief of the medical service of the Hawaiian Islands and physician of King Kalakaua.

In Harrison to our right hand was born and "raised" Hon. Melville H. Ingalls, president of the "Big Four" railroad. Here also was the birthplace of "Ned" Kendall, the famous bugler of the times of P. T. Barnum and Jennie Lind, with whom he traveled all over the civilized world. To our left in the town of Denmark was born Hazen Pingree, governor of Michigan, who, upon his father's rugged farm below us, learned the value of "potato patches." Here also was born and "growed" "Big Rufe Fesseuden," Boston's giant police sergeant. Away to the east we note Mount Mica and Speckled mountain in Paris and Buckfield.

In Paris was born Vice President Hannibal Hamlin. In Buckfield, John D. Long first saw the light, perhaps you have heard of them. In Woodstock, the adjoining town, was the birthplace of ex-Governor Sidney Perham, now of Washington, D. C. Here also was born Austin Beverly Chamberlain, who, from a freckled face lad chasing sheep over the Oxford hills, has risen to be Inspector General of the Masonic Fraternity in its south-western jurisdiction, with offices in Washington, D. C.

Bridgton, thirty miles from Poland Springs, has become a very famous summer resort, for health and pleasure seekers. The Appalachian club of Boston has taken possession of the town and surroundings. Buck boards, tally-hos, alpine stock and hob-nailed shoes are much in evidence. Highland lake at the base of our mountain has its wooded shores dotted with cottages of every fashion. Long lake at our eastern outlook is in like fashion dotted by cottages and boats. Pleasure parties are hourly seen, artists, photographers and amateurs of every grade abound.

A near neighbor of ours, bronzed and vigorous, is Andrew J. Bailey, corporation counsel of Boston, who tells me this is his fourteenth consecutive season in this region. His enthusiasm for this magnificent place is boundless. The artist Cole of Portland, last year's socialist candidate for governor of Maine, has a tent near ours and spends valuable time in shaping me into a socialist.

Chatham, Stow, Conway, Jackson, Bartlett and a score of Maine towns are in view. The panorama is ever changing and becoming more beautiful with autumn tints, why the average summer tourist so early forsakes all this is a puzzle. Our camps are high in air above all and we look down in scorn upon dwellers in hotel and boarding house.

This region is a favorite haunt of bears and wildcats, or Canadian lynx. A huge camp fire keeps our courage in fair condition. Thus far our wild visitors consist of monstrous owls and the lonely cry of a very far away loon. Last night in the small hours I was aroused by unearthly growls and grinding of teeth. Visions of grandfather's tales of panthers, bears and Indian devils chilled my blood until the noises were found to be the snoring of the chef-de-camp in his cooking tent. Deer and bears are plenty somewhere, at least there are abundant signs.

In the gray dawn we were aroused by the camp dog, who, endeavoring to gnaw the bottom of the frying pan, fell from the huge boulder, pan and all, into the smoldering camp fire. It is rumored we are to have boiled owl and roast dog for breakfast. The game warden, with sharp eyes, lives close at hand. We shall probably bring home no larger game than camels and an elephant or two.

BUCKFIELD.

Aurelia Bridgham.

On that beautiful afternoon of Nov. 3, the neighbors and friends of Aurelia Bridgham met at the old Bridgham homestead to pay the last earthly tribute to the memory of the deceased. The place of her birth has always been her home in which the services were held.

A very appropriate service was rendered by Rev. John C. Prince, the Methodist pastor. Four young misses, as pall bearers, formed a unique departure from general rules, marching at the head of the procession to the family lot only a few rods from the home.

She was the daughter of Dr. Wm. Bridgham long since deceased. Her age was 80 years. Relatives and friends came from Rumford Falls and West Minot. The wife of D. Charles Bridgham of Cohassett was in attendance.

Our weather prophet, Elden Grover, who lives but about two miles from the village on the opposite side of the river, came to the village about one week ago for the first time in two years. He has obeyed the injunction until now, when he says the quarantine has been lifted, and he has come to warn the people of this village of their impending danger. Mrs. Lucy A. Davis of Canton has received a letter from her brother, George Butterfield Smith, who for over 30 years has not been heard from by his relatives. They were convinced that he could not be living. In his letter he says in part: "I enlisted at the recruiting office on Portland street, Boston, and was sent from there to Governor's Island, New York harbor. From there I went West with 200 men, having been made a sergeant, at Montana, to join the 7th U. S. cavalry under Custer. We reached Fort Benton and from there made a long march to Camp Baker, where we joined our company. Was in the first campaign of '73 with Custer and Stanley in the Yellowstone. Again with Custer in '76. On the night of June 25, 1876, Custer, Terry and Gibbons held a council of war and on the morning of the 26th Custer started for the Rosebud and we went with Gibbons up the Yellowstone."

One Who Knew Ora Green.

I do not wish to intrude myself among the columns of your paper but if you have a little spare corner I would like to say just a few words in regard to the character of the young man, Ora Green, who made so sad an ending to his life a little more than a week ago.

Let no one suppose I mean to say anything to justify him in the deed done by him but I cannot think it planned or thought of very long beforehand as I knew him so well and neither can any one who knew him say he was ignorant for he was not.

I know something of that too as he attended school when a child where I was teacher and I know his intellect was good. He was naturally quick motioned smart to work and hardly ever failed in making things that boys usually have a craze for making. He was of good disposition, his lessons were always learned without much effort, but even then he was a source of ridicule among the strong, healthy boys as he was lame and could not join in their rough games. I tried to shield him all I could but a great many know that a teacher cannot know all that is going on.

His father and mother died while he was young and so he missed the love and care that such a boy needed and such as the most of our boys have who do not do much better than he has done.

At the time he attended school he made his home with his grandmother, Mrs. E. B. Knapp, a good motherly soul, who tried as far as she could with her poor health to take the dead mother's place, and today her heart is torn and bleeding for the poor boy who if life had been different for him might have been different too.

His ambition as a boy was to become an engineer and I encouraged him to do so as I thought it would be a future means of support. He studied for that place and with the means he had at his command he did well, so well that he could get plenty of work in the mills about here as engineer. He was badly hurt last year while working in the mill at Sunday River and since then no one can know how much he suffered as he never made any complaint. Who shall say he was not brave to do it?

No one was ever in trouble that he did not lend a helping hand. He was of an affectionate disposition and where he loved was so thoroughly bound up in the object as to forget everything else and I think the time has been that could his affection been turned in the right direction he might have been more of a man and saved what afterwards occurred.

We know that all he has lived for, for the last year, was the girl for whom at any time he would have given his own life, but since he was told his attentions were distasteful, he has grown selfish and crazed and the idea must have occurred to end his own life and take hers too.

Again I would say I do not wish anything I may say to appear as an excuse for the crime but felt there were so few who could know just what kind of a chance he had had all along when used as a football for the public to kick and cuff and I hope it will prove a very valuable lesson to the fathers and mothers who are spared to care for the children will try more carefully to bring up the children as they should be and study their dispositions and start them in the right direction at the first and look forward a little into the future and see what kind of a man or woman has come up through our care and let not our love for them overlook their faults.

BRYANT'S POND.

Pythian Sisterhood.

The Pythian Sisterhood Assemblies of Lewiston, Norway and Bryant's Pond visited the Oxford Assembly last Friday evening. The moon kindly gave us the benefit of its light and the evening was much enjoyed. About ninety sisters were present and were entertained in a manner that was a credit to the sisters of Oxford.

Drysdale tells us that when a woman becomes interested in woman's clubs and secret orders she loses her interest in culinary art but not so with the Oxford sisters for such tempting viands as were prepared by them for their guests, prove that a woman may be queen of the lodge room and the kitchen also, for a nicer lay out we do not often see and as to quantity, well, as we glanced over the tables we were reminded of the Englishman who said "In England we eat to live, but you Americans live to eat."

Meeting was held in the Opera House. After the work of the order was over we were seated at the table and delicious ice cream and cake was served and we were served by the different sisters and entertained for the night and want to say to our Oxford sisters that if we are fortunate enough to receive another invitation from them we certainly shall accept it.

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial.

It causes bunches in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"A bunch appeared on the left side of my neck. It caused great pain, was lanced, and became a running sore. I went into a general decline. I was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had taken six bottles my neck was healed, and I have never had any trouble of the kind since." MRS. K. T. SNYDER, Troy, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills will rid you of it, radically and permanently, as they have rid thousands.

The Autumn Leaf.

It is time to go out and gather the autumn leaf.

The girl who has already done so should throw the leaves away for they are not pretty until kissed by the November frost. The October leaves are faded and green and grey and brown. But the November leaves are a flaring red—a brilliant coral color, just the color for winter.

To the elderly person the sight of the faded leaf suggests decay, the end of things, the turning from the brightness and buoyancy of summer into the somberness of winter. The lady of advanced years looks upon the autumn leaf and sighs; and the spinster of poetic inclinations gets out her pen and indites a cheerful sonnet to the death of all Nature.

But not so the young woman; and no such thoughts has she.

To the girl who loves beauty, the girl of spirits, the sight of the autumn leaf acts as a tonic and as a suggestion. She longs to away to the woods, there to gather all the leaves she can carry, and to bring them home for the decoration of the house.

The autumn leaf girl is a distinct creation and, as the football girl disappears from the land, the autumn leaf girl appears, ready to take her place and to supply to the home certain qualities which the football girl did not possess.

The autumn leaf girl is a home loving girl. She goes to the woods to gather not flowers for her own personal gratification but great pieces of glory for the decking of the house.

Incendiary Fire.

An attempt was made last week to burn the Bridgton House at Bridgton. A little after midnight Wednesday night the proprietor, Charles E. Cobb, smelled smoke and on investigation he traced the smoke to the private dining room where he found rags soaked in kerosene oil burning and oil thrown about the walls of the room and adjoining rooms. There were thirty guests in the house. After a hard fight the fire was extinguished before much damage was done.

Doan's Kidney Pills,

A Modern Medicine for Every Kidney Ill.

Mr. T. H. Hughes, of Saxtons River, Vt., employed by B. F. Locke & Co., says: "My kidneys did not act properly for years, and it gradually grew on me. For two or three years they troubled me very much with a dull, aching pain across my back and in my loins. If I stood on my feet for any length of time, I felt the pain across my back more and my legs became numb. When the pain in my back got so bad that I could stand it no longer, I put on plasters, and I used a great many of them, but they only afforded me temporary relief. I also used medicines of all kinds, but they did not reach the cause. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, and so well recommended that I was induced to give them a trial, and I got them at Andrew's drug store. They gave me immediate relief. After the treatment I seldom felt any symptoms of my former troubles, but when I did I took a few of Doan's Kidney Pills and it soon left me. My rheumatic pains were not so severe, and I did not have that tired, languid feeling. I had more energy in doing my work and give all the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. They did me a great deal of good, and I feel justified in recommending them to others as a good and reliable medicine."

The Maine Building

At St. Louis Exhibition.

The building to be erected by the State of Maine at St. Louis Exhibition will cover an area of fifty-three hundred square feet, exclusive of the piazzas which surround the building. Including the piazzas the building will occupy a length of one hundred and forty feet and a width of sixty-eight feet.

The entrance is in the centre of the building and opens into a large and spacious hall, finished through two stories in height and exposing the roof construction. This central hallway will be twenty-four feet wide and forty-four feet long.

Directly opposite the entrance is a huge fireplace built of stone, flanked on either side by a comfortable seat. A gallery over the entrance doorway connects the two wings in the second story.

On the right of this central hallway on first floor is located a staircase hall, the staircase to be constructed of logs and poles, giving a very picturesque and attractive effect. Opposite this staircase will be a private office for the Commissioners, and a public office, where the visitors may obtain information and will receive every attention from the attendant in charge.

Beyond this section is a large room twenty-two feet by forty-nine feet, provided with a stone fireplace, and this room will be devoted to exhibits of the various industries and natural resources of the State.

On the left of the main hall in first story, corresponding to the space just described, will be provided the men's smoking room and toilet rooms, with a large and ample hallway connecting the main hall with a room twenty-two feet by forty-two feet, this room to be fitted up as a comfortable reading or living room, while here will be also provided exhibits illustrating the resources of Maine as a vacation State. The walls will be hung with fine photographs of the picturesque bits of forest and shore peculiar to Maine.

The second story will take in both wings of the building, connected as has been mentioned by the gallery across the main hall, and will be provided on one side with a large room to be used as a ladies' sitting room, and connected with which will be ample toilet facilities. Off this room is a pleasant loggia from which will be obtained a fine view of the grounds. The remainder of the second story is devoted to storage and apartments for the use of the Commissioners.

The building will be unique in character, as its "motif" is the log cabin, and the walls will be constructed of logs, the roofs covered with shaved shingles. It is not to be, however, a simple parallelogram but will be broken in plan, with a central pavilion, and with projecting pavilions at either end.

The masses have been finely arranged and the whole effect will be most pleasing and attractive, the long roof lines giving the effect of a low rambling building, yet even with this effect, ample height is obtained for the second story provided in the wings.

The logs for the building are to be logs grown in the Maine forests. The chimneys, which are all exposed, are to be built of stone picked up in the fields and pastures of Maine. The shingles used upon the roof have been made in Aroostook county, and in fact all parts of the building are to be of material grown and manufactured in the State of Maine.

The logs will be brought to the building site with the bark on but as the building is erected the bark will be removed and the freshly peeled logs will form the walls of the building and the interior main partitions. The effect of color with the gray shingled roof will represent as nearly as possible the beautiful quiet color effects to be found in the log camps in the Maine forests.

The work of constructing the building will be largely done by experts brought from Maine, who have been accustomed to building the sporting camps so liberally scattered through the Maine woods, and the axe is the principal tool which will be employed by the workmen upon the building.

The interior of the building is to be carried out in the same simple manner and with the same simple materials. While the main partitions are to be of the logs exposed to view, the minor partitions will be of planed spruce boards, battened.

The various seats and many pieces of furniture will be of the same character, and in fact in every detail throughout the interior it is the intention to make "consistency" the watchword. It is proposed to stain the interior walls and thus obtain charming effects of color, as the natural grain of the wood will not be obscured, but brought out in all its beauty.

The architect of the building, John Calvin Stevens of Portland, is a man of more than local fame, for his work is known throughout the country, and in this building he has shown his fine feeling for form and proportion. He has considered carefully the nature of his building material and has adapted his design to the legitimate and logical use of such material, relying upon the masses of the building with proper spacing of voids and solids for artistic effect rather than upon ornamental detail.

The central front shows a wide gable supported by heavy logs in the form of columns, making in general mass the effect of a two-storied portico, and this central gable rises above the main roof, as on every other side the roof is brought down to the level of the first story piazza, being in the main building one unbroken length of roof.

The two smaller gables which project one on either end are varied in detail while yet symmetrical in form, the deep shadow of the loggia in one giving a pleasing contrast to the glitter of the glass in the windows of the other.

The extreme ends of the building show the stone chimneys, with slightly projecting bay in second story, and although the projecting bay may seem rather out of keeping with log construction, yet so cleverly has the architect devised this that it seems to be entirely logical and consistent.

The building is sure to be one of the most attractive State buildings on the grounds, and will unquestionably reflect much credit upon the State it represents.

Now that women hunters are taking to the woods there's more danger than ever of men being mistaken for deers?

An Autumnal Day.

I'm looking at the clouds, all tinted with gold,
Adown the horizon cast;
An autumn day, from God's own hand,
Too beautiful to last.

It takes me back to childhood days
With mother and sister dear,
Seated around the old home fire,
On winter evenings clear.

With study and chat the hours flew by,
And bedtime came too soon;
Time can never efface the precepts taught
In that dear old room at home.

Another there was, a beautiful babe:
"Sweet Lizzie," we carved on the stone;
She was lent to us for a few short months,
And then God took her home.

Mother and father both are gone
To their home across the way;
Sister and I are all that's left
To work and watch and pray

That when life's duties for us are o'er,
We, too, may enter in
To the rest that remains for the children of God,
A home perfectly free from sin.

Every day we pray for a firmer trust
In the all-wise Father's care;
Feeling sure if we love and try to serve him,
Every burden he'll help us to bear.

Norway, Me. HATTIE A. SMALL.

The Man from Boston Who Was Too Previous.

It was a trying state of affairs, for one of the two men at any rate. For he had killed his two deer, by sheer luck, in one hour after he alighted from the train; and he wanted to go home with his meat. But, alas! he did not dare to. He got his deer so easily, so quickly, and last but not least, he felt so good—and by the way did you ever notice the fact that all Boston men do?—he was very anxious to hasten to "the Hub" and to his many friends declare:

"It is dead easy, just like felling off a log. You get off the train, take a stroll before dinner, run onto two deer in the road, aim, press the trigger, the rifle does the rest."

He was smart with his tongue, now I assure you. Quick, sarcastic, sharp. But his companion could "see him, call him, and go him one better" every time. It all happened this way.

Going out to the settlement one day after my mail I was obliged to await the arrival of the train. After some time spent in calling upon friends, and purchasing a few necessary camp articles, I was at last pleased to hear the train in the distance. Securing my mail I was about to return to camp, when I was approached by two men who had just alighted from the train. I was asked by one of them, in a gentlemanly manner, were there many deer about? Which way was I bound? What time did they serve dinner at the hotel? Was the road which I was about to travel a plain, easy one for them to follow back. And wouldn't they have a plenty of time to take their rifles, accompany me a part of my journey, and then get back in time for dinner? Upon my assuring them I would be glad of their company, that I was bound for my camp, that I frequently saw deer as I travelled this road, and that they could not get lost if they kept in the road, we started.

The day was perfect. And as we kept ascending the mountain over which the road to my camp passed, I thoroughly enjoyed answering their many questions pointing out the places of interest and watching their enthusiasm.

At last the time for parting had come. As we stood shaking hands and saying good bye, on looking just over one of the men's shoulder I caught sight, right in the edge of the woods not five rods away, of a buck and a doe.

Making no movement, in a low tone I fully explained where they stood. Raising his rifle to his shoulder, wheeling at the same time, the man farthest from me killed them both.

Now I want to give the man full credit. The job was well done—for a Boston man. As I was dressing the deer for them, the man who had shot them—after he recovered sufficiently to realize what he had done, that he really had two deer all his own, hardly an hour off the train, his dinner not even eaten—grabbed me and started in on a war dance.

I was so convulsed with laughter at his antics, I had a terrible pain in my side and was obliged to beg him to let up. After the two deer were dressed and properly hung up, the successful hunter proposed to hurry right back to the hotel, get a team, haul his deer to the station and return to Boston on the afternoon train.

This was a poser for the other man. But he was equal to the occasion.

"You will, will you? Where are my deer? Now, see here, Charlie. If you go home this afternoon, I shall go on the same train with you, and when we do get to Boston, and in dulcet tones you tell how you accomplished this unheard-of feat, who will take any stock in your yarn: 'Two deer, one hour after leaving the train before dinner?' And, Charlie, I shall tell them that it's all a ——ie; that you paid five dollars apiece for those deer; that you got so blooming homesick that you were simply bound to return. Now, honestly, Charlie, which is the more likely story? Better stay and help me get my two deer, old Boy."

He stayed.

Supreme Judicial Court.

October Term, 1903.

Thursday morning David Christie, who had previously pleaded not guilty on a liquor nuisance indictment and later retracted and entered a plea of guilty, was brought into court and received a sentence of five months in Auburn jail.

The trial of James M. Graves of Rumford Falls for liquor nuisance and disorderly house was then begun, John P. Swasey defending Graves. Graves and his wife run a boarding house in Rumford Falls village and the nuisance alleged was the holding of dances frequently in August and September of this year, at which there were many intoxicated men and drinking, quarreling, loud and profane talk, disturbing the peace of the neighbors, who were the complainants.

The defence claimed that they were got up by the boarders, that no liquor was dispensed in the house, and that the dances have been discontinued because uninvited people came and made a disturbance. The jury was out a few minutes and returned a verdict of not guilty, Friday morning.

Jay J. Gregory did not stand trial, but paid a fine of $100 and costs on search and seizure complaint and the nuisance indictment was continued.

Shortly before noon, Friday, Joseph R. Prince, who had pleaded guilty of arson, was brought in for sentence. The fire was set in the upper part of a small building on Waldo street, Rumford Falls, one Saturday afternoon. Prince was hired to do it for, as he claimed, $100, of which he only received $20. Joseph A. Marin, who owned a drug store on the first floor, has two indictments against him for procuring the burning of the building to defraud the insurance company. He was under $1,400 bonds to appear at this term of court, and the bond has been defaulted.

Judge Peabody sentenced Prince to two years in State prison.

Probably as much interest has been manifested in the case against William J. Wheeler as any case before this term of court. Mr. Wheeler is president of the Oxford County Agricultural Society, and the offence was obstruction of officers who were making arrests the first day of the fair. At a hearing in the Norway Municipal Court he waived examination and the case came directly to this court. There was no trial, as the complaint was quashed, Friday morning.

The juries were finally discharged and routine business was attended to in a brief afternoon session, aster which court adjourned.

The term was 16 days in length, with two exceptions. May 1896 and October 1894, 17 days each, the longest held for ten years. Two long and three shorter jury civil cases and one certified to the law court were tried, one criminal jury case and a large amount of civil cases settled, and criminal matters disposed of. The total amount of fines and costs was almost $1,100.

In each of the civil jury trials verdicts were rendered for the plaintiff, in practically all the amounts sued for. Except the case of Leador vs. Peters, the cases go to the law court.

A number of jurors having been excused during the term for various reasons, talesmen were called from among the spectators to fill the panels, and Chandler Swift, Carroll G. Curtis, A. F. Barrows and John W. Chute, all of South Paris, served in that capacity.

The total number of divorces this term was 27. Those not before published:

Chas. H. Whitman from Laura C. Whitman—cruel and abusive treatment. Custody of minor child, Lawrence Alford, to father, and minor children, Annie L. and Marguerite L., to the mother.

Ida D. Jenne from J. Herbert Jenne—cruel and abusive treatment.

Josiah P. Kimball from Elsie M. Kimball—cruel and abusive treatment. Custody of minor child to father.

WEST PARIS.

Improving the Looks of the Village.

We do not boast of a village improvement society as some villages can but we have got one man, at least, who likes to see and make improvements. L. C. Bates with the cooperation of the owners and other interested parties has moved the unsightly old horse sheds that have been standing on a corner of the Free Baptist church lot and attached them to the rear end of the church extending from one side to the other, and is having them repaired and painted, which makes them present a very neat appearance.

Mr. Bates has also graded the grounds between his new tenement house and the church, and set out several trees there and two in front of the church. The other interested parties, who are pleased with the improvement so well begun, are grading the church yard, filling in the "cut off corner" road across the church lot, also the one across Alfred Perham's front yard and laying out the street in the proper place.

When all is done, with a few more shade trees set out, it will surely make a great improvement to the village.
